

Benjamin H.G. Acorn, Connor J. Nelson, Scott E. Nielsen, and Carol M. Frost. 2026.
Linear anthropogenic disturbances increase butterfly abundance, species richness, and cross-corridor movements. The Canadian Entomologist, 158: e10045.
<https://doi.org/10.4039/tce.2025.10045>.

Supplementary material, Figure S1. Geographic distribution of the sites used for data collection in the present study. All sites are located in the Richardson area of Alberta, Canada's boreal forest. Each site is located on a seismic line.