

SUPPLEMENTARY MATERIAL – Modelled frontal ablation and velocities at Kronebreen, Svalbard, are sensitive to the choice of submarine melt rate scenario

Felicity A. HOLMES,^{1,2} Eef VAN DONGEN,³ Nina KIRCHNER¹

¹Department of Physical Geography, Stockholm University, Sweden

²Department of Geological Sciences, Stockholm University, Sweden

³Department of Meteorology, Stockholm University, Sweden

Correspondence: Felicity Holmes <felicity.holmes@geo.su.se>

Fig S1: Plots showing the modelled, observed, and modelled-observed velocities during Summer (a-c) and winter (d-f) used for and created by the model inversions

