TESTS ON THE MECHANISM

In Mexico, politicians holding public office that want to run for an elected position need to step out of their posts before campaigns and pre-campaigns start. They ask for a temporary leave commonly known as licencia. These rules apply to most local legislators running for reelection in 2018.¹ This period corresponds on average to approximately 3 months before the election. Thus, by the start of the licencia period, parties have already selected which legislators are running for reelection. Since legislators running for reelection are absent during this period, we can determine whether it is a party strategy to engage in more particularistic legislation later in the electoral cycle. If the incentive to get reelected is driving our findings, we should find no shift towards particularistic legislation during the licencia period, since legislators in office at this time know they are not running for reelection.

Table A13: Differences-in-Differences estimator of Long-Term Reelection Incentives on the proportion of discussion allocated to particularistic legislation restricting the sample to the licencias period.

Mexico is a federal system and states are subnational political units with independent executives and legislative bodies. The federal system granted states the authority to self-determine the number legislators that would comprise their legislatures (Art. 115 of the Mexican Constitution). Thus, there is variance across states in the number of legislators elected in SSDs and those elected in closed lists by PR. This variance implies that local-level SSDs are population-balanced within the state but not across different states. For example, while legislators in Estado de Mexico represent over 200,000 constituents, in Campeche each legislator only represents slightly over 25,000 individuals. State-level SSDs differ to the federal-level SSDs, with the former being drawn according to the national population and the latter concerning the population of each state. First we calculated the proportion of each legislature elected in SSDs. Then, we leverage this variance to estimate the marginal effect of the difference-in-difference estimator (tested in Hypothesis 1) at different proportions of the legislature elected in SSDs. We expect that higher percentages of the legislature elected in SSDs lead to larger average marginal effects of the difference-in-differences estimator because a larger proportion of legislators elected in SSDs implies more legislators looking to cultivate their personal vote.

¹Some states do not require legislators running for reelection to step out of their office.

RESULTS FOR H2 BY LEGISLATIVE PERIOD

(a) States with Long-Term Reelection Incentives in the Legislative Period 2015-2018 (b) States with Long-Term Reelection Incentives in the Legislative Period 2016-2018

Figure A4: Results are derived from computing the effect of Long-Term Reelection Incentives but restricting the sample on each model only for comparable years before and after the election. All models have State Fixed Effects, Month-Year Fixed Effects and robust clustered standard errors at the state level. Vertical lines span 90% and 95% confidence intervals.

SENSITIVITY TEST FOR PARALLEL TRENDS FOR H3

Table A16: Balance tables for legislators' relevant covariates by treatment assignment.

	Short-Term Reelection Incentives	Long-Term Reelection Incentives	Difference	P-value
Education Years	7.539 (152)	7.666 (341)	-0.126	0.595
Years of Political Experience (Any)	9.690 (155)	8.154 (345)	1.537	0.014
Years of Political Experience (Appointed)	7.619 (155)	5.898 (343)	1.721	0.002
Years of Political Experience (Elected)	2.084 (154)	2.303 (343)	-0.219	0.435

Number of observations in parenthesis.

ROBUSTNESS TEST FOR H1

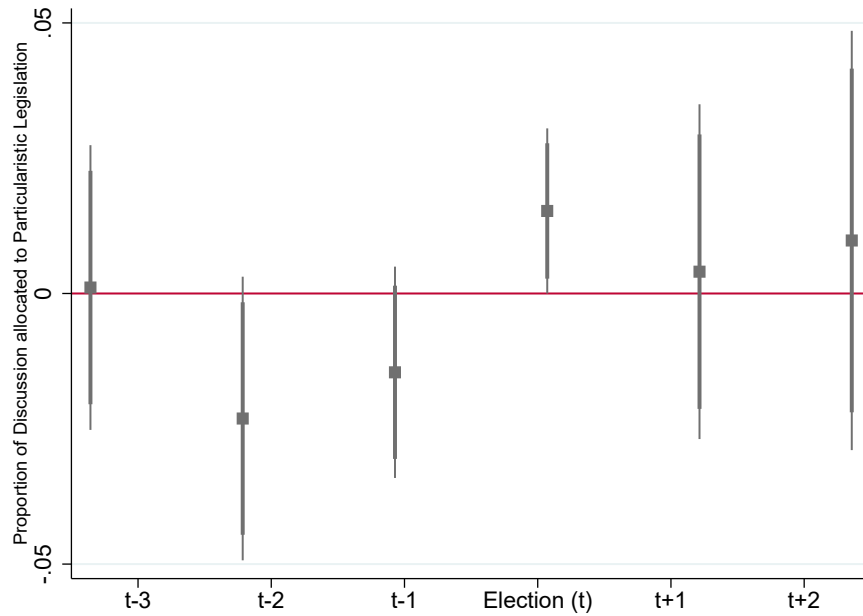

Figure A5: Robustness test for H1. Results are derived from six regression models with the proportion of speech allocated to particularistic legislation as the dependent variable and a different assignment of the timing of treatment in separate regressions. All models have State Fixed Effects, Month-Year Fixed Effects and robust clustered standard errors at the state level. Vertical lines span 95% confidence intervals.

HAUSMAN TEST

$$H0 : [\beta T_t \times R_s] - [\beta T_t \times LS_s] = 0$$

$$chi2(1) = 2.17$$

$$Prob > chi2 = 0.1406$$

72	general	Law Initiative regarding the Provision of Childcare Services for the State of Guerrero [...] It is necessary to regulate daycare centers within our legal framework so that they do not get established in dangerous and unhealthy places, to ensure the quality of care to achieve a more efficient comprehensive operation, as well as to comply with the legal requirements which are applied by the authorities. The law proposed in this initiative includes the regulation of personal service facilities, the requirements of day care centers, medical care of minors, the delivery of minors at the exit, the guarantee of access to children with non-dependent disabilities, as well as the procedures regulating their verification and surveillance, and, in the event of any violation of this law, their respective infractions and sanctions...
78	particularistic	Proposal to issue the Profession Law of the State of Sinaloa [...] this new law establishes the mechanisms for professional certification and endorsement, as well as the certifying bodies that will be authorized and supervised by the educational authority. Even though professional certification will be voluntary for professionals, these will allow us to assess their level of competence and the degree of updating, in relation to the knowledge of the profession or professional branch, as well as the skills and aptitudes they possess [...] the certifying bodies will be the professional boards themselves, which are thus accredited by the educational authority [...] Here in this new Law, we establish the rules and requirements for its functionality. We are dedicating a complete chapter to guarantee the rules for their constitution, registration, attributions and obligations given the importance that professional boards will have in this new legal design ...

267	general	The Autonomous Metropolitan University, as a higher education institution, has been characterized since its inception in 1973 for being innovative and for contributing to the learning of younger generations. In its four decades with projection into the future, today's achievements have been the result of 40 years of research, education and continuous teaching. Today the UAM is one of the most well-known and recognized platforms for public education at the national and international level [...] The campuses that comprise it were created in response to a metropolitan need to have a greater number of spaces for young people from the capital to be trained as the professionals of tomorrow who will take this Mexican capital to its optimal growth and sustainability in its development. Likewise, in addition to its vision of sustainability and its technological and cultural achievements, all of its campuses have world-class research and teaching [...] By virtue of this, I take the moment to reaffirm our commitment to contribute with our actions and legislative tasks to the development and innovation of social and environmental education, with the sole objective of building a promising future...
313	particularistic	The Education Law of the State of Guerrero establishes the competences of the National Institute for the Evaluation of Education. These include, among others, the evaluation of the national educational system in preschool, primary, secondary and upper secondary education [...] in the present reforms, additions and derogations proposed to the Education Law of the State of Guerrero, it is considered pertinent to modify the third article, which establishes the recognition of the rights and achievements of education workers. So that, as they are recognized by the educational authorities, in the labor negotiation process of the union's petition documents, they become rights for the benefit of their representatives [...] the authorities must apply performance evaluations derived from the guidelines issued by the National Institute for the Evaluation of Education. The local educational authorities will grant the corresponding certification to teachers who obtain satisfactory results and will offer training courses and regularization programs to those with deficiencies [...] The State will grant a decent professional salary that allows teachers to achieve a decent standard of living and enjoy decent housing, as well as having the necessary time to prepare for the classes they teach, and to carry out activities aimed at their personal and professional development [...] The local educational authorities will give recognitions (distinctions, incentives and rewards) to educators who excel in the exercise of their profession and, in general, will carry out activities that foster greater social appreciation for the work carried out by teachers. In addition, they will establish mechanisms of encouragement (granting of recognitions, distinctions, incentives and rewards) to teachers based on their evaluation ...
