“The Qualitative Transparency Deliberations: Insights and Implications”

Perspectives on Politics

Author Biographies

Ana Arjona: Ana Arjona (ana.arjona@northwestern.edu), PhD, Yale University, is Associate Professor at the Political Science Department at Northwestern University. She been a Fellow at the Earth Institute at Columbia University and the Kellogg Institute for International Studies at the University of Notre Dame. Her research investigates the dynamics and legacies of organized violence, especially civil wars and organized crime. She is the author, among others, of the award-winning book Rebelocracy: Social Order in Civil War (Cambridge University Press, 2016), co-editor of Rebel Governance in Civil War (Cambridge University Press, 2015).

Leonardo R. Arriola: Leonardo R. Arriola (larriola@berkeley.edu) is Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of California, Berkeley, and Associated Senior Researcher at the Chr. Michelsen Institute, Bergen, Norway. At Berkeley, he is also Associate Dean of Social Sciences and Director of the Center for African Studies. His research focuses on democratization, governance, and political violence.

Eva Bellin: Eva Bellin (ebellin@brandeis.edu) is the Myra and Robert Kraft Professor of Arab Politics at Brandeis University. She is the author of Stalled Democracy: Capital Labor and the Paradox of State Sponsored Development and co-editor of Building Rule of Law in the Arab World. Her latest published work focuses on the puzzle of democratic divergence in Tunisia and Egypt following the Arab Spring and appears in the Fall 2018 edition of Political Science Quarterly.

Andrew Bennett: Andrew Bennett (bennetta@georgetown.edu) is Professor of Government at Georgetown University. He is the co-author, with Alexander George, of Case Studies and Theory Development in the Social Sciences, and co-editor, with Jeffrey Checkel, of Process Tracing: From Metaphor to Analytic Tool. His recent methodological writings have focused on the Bayesian logic of process tracing, generalizing from case studies, and process tracing in program evaluation.

Lisa Björkman: Lisa Björkman (lbjorkman6@gmail.com) teaches in the Department of Urban and Public Affairs at University of Louisville. Her research in Mumbai studies how global processes of urbanism and urban transformation are redrawing lines of socio-spatial exclusions and inclusions, animating new arenas of political mobilization, contestation and representation. Björkman’s first book, Pipe Politics, Contested Waters: Embedded Infrastructures of Millennial Mumbai (Duke University Press, October 2015), is a political ethnography about the encounter in Mumbai between market-oriented urban development reforms and the material politics of the city’s water infrastructures. Björkman received a Ph.D. in Politics from the New School for Social Research in New York in 2012.

Erik Bleich: Erik Bleich (ebleich@middlebury.edu) is the Charles A. Dana Professor of Political Science at Middlebury College. His scholarship focuses on race and ethnic politics in Europe and North America, and on the role of ideas in politics. He is the author of The Freedom to Be Racist? How the United States and Europe Struggle to Preserve Freedom and Combat Racism; Race Politics in Britain and France: Ideas and Policymaking since the 1960s; and (with Robert Pekkanen) “How to Report Interview Data,” in Interview Research in Political Science.

Tim Büthe: Tim Büthe (buthe@hfp.tum.de) is Professor and Chair for International Relations, Hochschule für Politik/School of Governance and School of Management at the Technical University of Munich (TUM), as well as a Senior Fellow of the Kenan Institute for Ethics at Duke University. He is the (co-)author of numerous articles and The New Global Rulers: The Privatization of Regulation in the World Economy, recipient of the 2013 International Studies Association Best Book Award. Büthe was, with Alan Jacobs, co-chair of the Steering Committee of the Qualitative Transparency Deliberations and co-recipient of the 2017 David Collier Mid-Career Achievement Award of the APSA’s Qualitative and Multi-Method Research Section.

Zachary Elkins: Zachary Elkins (zelkins@austin.utexas.edu) is Associate Professor of Government at the University of Texas at Austin. He studies issues of democracy, institutional reform, research methods, and national identity, with an emphasis on cases in Latin America. Much of his recent research concerns the origins and consequences of constitutional choices. Elkins co-directs both the Comparative Constitutions Project and constituteproject.org, a comprehensive set of historical data and texts on the world’s constitutions. Elkins earned his B.A. from Yale University, an M.A. from the University of Texas at Austin, and his Ph.D. from the University of California, Berkeley.

Tasha Fairfield: Tasha Fairfield (T.A.Fairfield@lse.ac.uk) is Associate Professor at the London School of Economics. Her methodological work (with A.E. Charman) includes “Explicit Bayesian Analysis for Process Tracing” (Political Analysis, 2017; APSA QMMR Sage Paper Award), “A Dialogue with the Data: The Bayesian Foundations of Iterative Research in Qualitative Social Science” (Perspectives on Politics, 2019), and a book manuscript, “Social Inquiry and Bayesian Inference: Rethinking Qualitative Research.” She is the author of Private Wealth and Public Revenue in Latin America: Business Power and Tax Politics (Cambridge University Press, 2015; Latin American Studies Association Donna Lee Van Cott Award).

Nikhar Gaikwad: Nikhar Gaikwad (nikhar.gaikwad@columbia.edu) is Assistant Professor at Columbia University who specializes in international and comparative political economy, with a focus on the politics of economic policymaking, trade and migration, and identity. He has a regional specialization in India, which he studies in comparative perspective with Brazil and other democratic emerging economies. Prior to joining Columbia University, he was a Fellow at the Niehaus Center for Globalization and Governance at Princeton University. He received his PhD from Yale University.

Sheena Chestnut Greitens: Sheena Chestnut Greitens (sheena.greitens@austin.utexas.edu) is Associate Professor at the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at The University of Texas at Austin and a non-resident fellow at the Korea Chair at the Center for Strategic and International Studies and the Brookings Institution. Her research focuses on security, authoritarian politics, and the politics and international relations of East Asia. Her first book, Dictators and Their Secret Police: Coercive Institutions and State Violence (Cambridge, 2016), won the Best Book Award from both the International Studies Association and APSA’s Comparative Democratization section.

Veronica Herrera: Veronica Herrera (vherrera@luskin.ucla.edu) is Assistant Professor at UCLA’s Luskin School of Public Affairs. She teaches urban politics and policy in the Global South, with a focus on Latin America and comparative environmental politics. She is the author of the award-winning book, Water and Politics: Clientelism and Reform in Urban Mexico (2017), and her work has appeared in Comparative Politics, World Development, Latin American Politics and Society, PS: Political Science and Politics, and Journal of Development Studies.

Yoshiko M. Herrera: Yoshiko M. Herrera (yherrera@wisc.edu) is Professor of Political Science at University of Wisconsin-Madison. Her research interests include politics in Eurasia, nationalism, social identities, norms, and constructivist political economy. She is author of Imagined Economies: The Sources of Russian Regionalism (Cambridge Univ Press, 2005), Mirrors of the Economy: National Accounts and International Norms in Russia and Beyond (Cornell Univ Press, 2010), and co-editor of Measuring Identity: A Guide for Social Scientists (Cambridge Univ Press, 2009), as well as articles in Political Analysis, Perspectives on Politics, Comparative Politics, and Social Science Quarterly.

Alan M. Jacobs: Alan M. Jacobs (alan.jacobs@ubc.ca) is Professor of Political Science at the University of British Columbia. He is the author of Governing for the Long Term: Democracy and the Politics of Investment, co-recipient of the APSA’s 2012 Luebbert Award for the Best Book in Comparative Politics, and numerous articles in the fields of comparative public policy and political economy, political behavior, and methodology. Jacobs was, with Tim Büthe, co-chair of the Steering Committee of the Qualitative Transparency Deliberations and co-recipient of the 2017 David Collier Mid-Career Achievement Award of the APSA’s Qualitative and Multi-Method Research Section.

Kimberley S. Johnson: Kimberley Johnson (kj37@nyu.edu) is Professor of Social and Cultural Analysis and Affiliate Faculty Member of the Wagner School of New York University. Johnson’s research focuses on American and urban political development, urban and local politics, and race and ethnic politics. Johnson is the author of two books, Reforming Jim Crow (2010) and Governing the American State (2007) and numerous articles on American political development and its intersection with racial and ethnic politics. Current research projects focus on African American urban and suburban politics. Johnson is completing a book manuscript, tentatively titled, Dark Concrete, exploring the development of black power urbanism in Newark and East Orange, New Jersey, and Oakland and East Palo Alto, California.

Ekrem Karakoç: Ekrem Karakoç (ekarakoc@binghamton.edu) is Associate Professor of Political Science at Binghamton University (SUNY). He specializes in comparative politics with a focus on inequality and democratization. He is the author of numerous articles and a book, Inequality after the Transition (Oxford University Press 2018).

Kendra Koivu: Kendra Koivu (PhD, Northwestern University) was Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of New Mexico. Her numerous research articles focused on the political economy of illicit markets, the development of international drug-control regimes, the twin processes of state-building and market development, and qualitative methodology. She was, with Jennifer Cyr, co-editor of Qualitative and Multi-Method Research, published by the APSA’s QMMR section; served as a member of the section’s Executive Committee; and was a co-founder and co-organizer of the Southwest Workshop on Mixed Methods Research. Kendra passed away in the fall of 2019.

Marcus Kreuzer: Marcus Kreuzer (Markus.Kreuzer@villanova.edu), Professor of Political Science at Villanova University, works on the formation of party systems in interwar and post-communist Europe, the origins of modern democratic institutions, and qualitative methodology. He is currently completing a book entitled The Grammar of Time: Using Comparative Historical Analysis to Answer Macro-Historical Questions.

Milli Lake: Milli Lake (m.lake@lse.ac.uk) is Associate Professor of Political Science at the London School of Economics’ International Relations Department. Lake’s research addresses state-society relations and institution-building in Central Africa. Together with Marie Berry, Lake co-directs the Women’s Rights After War project, which evaluates the politicization of women's post-conflict empowerment efforts. She is also the co-director of the Advancing Research on Conflict consortium, and runs a summer field methods program for doctoral students preparing to embark on field research in volatile or conflict-affected research sites.

Timothy W. Luke: Timothy W. Luke (twluke@vt.edu) is University Distinguished Professor, and, Chair, Department of Political Science at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University. His research focuses on environmental political theory, international politics, social and political theory as they relate to cultural politics, global governance, political economy, science and technology studies.

Lauren M. MacLean: Lauren M. MacLean (macleanl@indiana.edu) is the Arthur F. Bentley Chair and Professor of Political Science at Indiana University. Her research focuses on the political economy of state formation, public service provision, and democratic citizenship in Africa. MacLean has published leading articles and award-winning books on the informal institutions of reciprocity, non-state provision of social welfare, and field research methods. She was the recipient of the APSA 2016 David Collier Mid-Career Achievement Award. As a Carnegie Fellow (2017-19), she started a new book project focused on the politics of the electricity crisis and the exercise of democratic citizenship in Ghana.

Samantha Majic: Samantha Majic, PhD, (smajic@jjay.cuny.edu) is Associate Professor of Political Science at John Jay College-City University of New York. Her research considers sex work, civic engagement, gender politics, and celebrities, and it has appeared in numerous political science and gender studies journals. She is also the author of three books: Sex Work Politics: From Protest to Service Provision (2014), Negotiating Sex Work: Unintended Consequences of Policy and Activism (2014, co-edited with Carisa Showden) and Youth Who Trade Sex in the US: Agency, Intersectionality, and Vulnerability (2018, co-authored with Carisa Showden).

Zachariah Mampilly: Zachariah Mampilly (zachariah.mampilly@baruch.cuny.edu) is the Marxe Endowed Chair of International Affairs at the School of Public and International Affairs, CUNY. He is the author of Rebel Rulers: Insurgent Governance and Civilian Life during War and the co-author of Africa Uprising: Popular Protest and Political Change.

Rahsaan Maxwell: Rahsaan Maxwell (rahsaan@email.unc.edu) is Professor of Political Science at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. His research explores how national boundaries operate. Within that theme he has pursued numerous topics including immigrant integration, political representation, identity, political behavior, urban-rural divides, cultural diversity, and globalization.

Robert Mickey: Rob Mickey (rmickey@umich.edu) is Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Michigan. His interests include U.S. democratic development, racial conflict, and the politics of economic inequality. He is the author of Paths Out of Dixie: The Democratization of Authoritarian Enclaves in America’s Deep South, 1944-1972 (Princeton University Press, 2015). With David Waldner, he is at work on a study of nation-building that compares the U.S. occupation of Iraq and America’s post-Civil War Reconstruction.

Sarah E. Parkinson: Sarah E. Parkinson (sparkinson@jhu.edu) is the Aronson Assistant Professor of Political Science and International Studies at Johns Hopkins University. Grounded by social network theory and ethnographic methodologies, her research examines organizational behavior and social change in war- and disaster-affected settings, focusing on the Middle East and North Africa. Parkinson has conducted extensive fieldwork in Lebanon and Iraq. She has published scholarship on militant organizations’ decision-making and internal dynamics, political violence, forced migration, ethics, and research methods. Parkinson is also a co-founder of the Advancing Research on Conflict (ARC) Consortium. She received her PhD in political science from the University of Chicago.

Craig Parsons: Craig Parsons (cap@uoregon.edu) is Professor and Department Head of Political Science at the University of Oregon and Senior Researcher at the ARENA Centre for European Studies at the University of Oslo. He is author or editor of six books and many articles on the European Union, political economy, qualitative methods and philosophy of science.

Wendy Pearlman: Wendy Pearlman (pearlman@northwestern.edu) is Professor of Political Science at Northwestern University, where she specializes in Middle East politics. She is the author of four books, We Crossed A Bridge and It Trembled: Voices from Syria (HarperCollins, 2017), Violence, Nonviolence, and the Palestinian National Movement (Cambridge University Press, 2011) Occupied Voices: Stories of Everyday Life from the Second Intifada (Nation Books, 2003), and Triadic Coercion: Israel’s Targeting of States that Host Nonstate Actors (co-authored with Boaz Atzili, Columbia University Press). Wendy has conducted research in Spain, Germany, Lebanon, Jordan, Turkey, Israel, and the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Mark A. Pollack: Mark A. Pollack (mark.pollack@temple.edu) is Professor of Political Science and Law, Jean Monnet Chair, and Director of Global Studies at Temple University, where he conducts research on international law and organizations. His most recent research, with Jeffrey Dunoff, focuses on the practices of international courts and tribunals: initial publications from this project include “The Judicial Trilemma” in the American Journal of International Law (2017) and “International Judicial Practices” in the Michigan Journal of International Law (2019).

Elliot Posner: Elliot Posner (eap26@case.edu) is Professor of Political Science at Case Western Reserve University where he teaches courses on international relations, political economy, finance and the European Union. His research explores new and enduring questions about international cooperation and conflict, regulatory power, bureaucracy and new market formation. He has written broadly on the politics of finance, focusing on the internal sources of the EU’s external power, the changing terms of Transatlantic regulatory cooperation and the political relevance of transnational soft law. He and Abraham Newman are the authors of Voluntary Disruptions: International Soft Law, Finance and Power (Oxford University Press, 2018).

Rachel Beatty Riedl: Rachel Beatty Riedl (rbeattyriedl@cornell.edu) is the John S. Knight Professor of International Studies in the Government Department and Director of the Einaudi Center for International Studies at Cornell University. Riedl is the author of Authoritarian Origins of Democratic Party Systems in Africa (Cambridge University Press, 2014) and co-author of From Pews to Politics: Religious Sermons and Political Participation in Africa (2019). She studies democracy and institutions, governance, authoritarian regime legacies, and religion in Africa. A former Kellogg Institute visiting fellow, Yale Program on Democracy Fellow, and Faculty Fulbright Scholar, she is currently a Fellow at the Institute for Advanced Study, Nantes.

Edward Schatz: Edward Schatz (ed.schatz@utoronto.ca) is Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Toronto. He is interested in ethnographic approaches to politics and the politics of post-Soviet space.

Carsten Q. Schneider: Carsten Q. Schneider (schneiderc@ceu.edu) is Professor of Political Science at Central European University (CEU). His research in Comparative Politics and social science methodology appeared, among others, in Comparative Political Studies, Democratization, the European Journal of Political Research, Sociological Methods and Research, and Political Analysis. His co-authored book on Set-Theoretic Methods in the Social Sciences was published with Cambridge University Press in 2012. He is currently working on a book on applied set-theoretic multi-method research and on comparing speeches by heads of government in democratic and autocratic regimes, using automated text analysis.

Jillian Schwedler: Dr. Jillian Schwedler (js1287@hunter.cuny.edu) is Professor of Political Science at the City University of New York’s Hunter College and the Graduate Center. She is Senior Fellow at the Crown Center at Brandeis University, and member of the Board of Directors and the Editorial Committee of Middle East Report. During the Spring 2020 semester, she will be Visiting Professor and Fulbright Scholar at the Center for Global and International Studies at the University of Salamanca, Spain. Dr. Schwedler’s books include the award-winning Faith in Moderation: Islamist Parties in Jordan and Yemen (Cambridge 2006). Her forthcoming book is Protesting Jordan: Geographies of Power and Dissent.

Anastasia Shesterinina: Anastasia Shesterinina (a.shesterinina@sheffield.ac.uk) is a Lecturer (Assistant Professor) at the Department of Politics and International Relations at the University of Sheffield. Her fieldwork-intensive research explores the internal dynamics of and international intervention in armed conflict, with a focus on ordinary people’s mobilization in conditions of uncertainty, demobilization of rank-and-file combatants and mid-level commanders, and civilian protection norms and

Erica S. Simmons: Erica S. Simmons (essimons@wisc.edu) is Associate Professor of Political Science and International Studies at the University of Wisconsin–Madison and holds the Department of Political Science Board of Visitors Professorship. Simmons’ research and teaching are motivated by an interest in contentious politics and qualitative methods. Her recent book, Meaningful Resistance: Market Reforms and the Roots of Social Protest in Latin America, tackles questions of resistance to the marketization of subsistence in Latin America. The book was recognized by the Collective Behavior and Social Movements Section of the American Sociological Association with the 2017 Charles Tilly Distinguished Contribution to Scholarship Book Award.

Diane Singerman: Diane Singerman (dsinger@american.edu) is Associate Professor in the Department of Government, School of Public Affairs at American University. Her publications include: Cairo Contested: Governance, Urban Space, and Global Modernity (ed.), Cairo Cosmopolitan: Politics, Culture, and Urban Space in the New Globalized Middle East (co-edited with Paul Amar), Avenues of Participation: Family, Politics, and Networks in Urban Quarters of Cairo, and Development, Change, and Gender in Cairo: A View from the Household (co-edited with Homa Hoodfar). She is also Co-Director of Tadamun: The Cairo Urban Solidarity Initiative, which focuses on urban issues, local governance, and social justice in Egypt and the Middle East.

Nicholas Rush Smith: Nicholas Rush Smith (nsmith3@ccny.cuny.edu) is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the City University of New York - City College and a Research Associate, Faculty of Humanities, University of Johannesburg. His first book, Contradictions of Democracy: Vigilantism and Rights in Post-Apartheid South Africa, was published by Oxford University Press in 2019. He is on the editorial committee of Comparative Politics and has published research in the American Journal of Sociology, Comparative Politics, African Affairs, and PS: Political Science and Politics, and Qualitative and Multi-Method Research.

Hillel David Soifer: Hillel David Soifer (hsoifer@temple.edu) is Associate Professor of Political Science at Temple University. His research centers on state building and historical development in Latin America as well as issues related to research design and qualitative methodology. He has published State Building in Latin America (Cambridge, 2015) and Politics After Violence (co-edited, University of Texas Press, 2019) as well as articles in journals such as Comparative Political Studies, Latin American Research Review, Studies in Comparative International Development, and (forthcoming) Social Science History. He is currently working on a book about the modifiable areal unit problem and its impact on political science research.

Scott Spitzer: Scott J. Spitzer (sspitzer@fullerton.edu) is Associate Professor of Political Science at California State University, Fullerton (CSUF) and earned his Ph.D. in Political Science at Columbia University in 2000. His research focuses on the Presidency, racial politics, and social welfare policymaking.

Jonas Tallberg: Jonas Tallberg (jonas.tallberg@statsvet.su.se) is Professor of Political Science at Stockholm University. His research interests are global governance and European Union politics. He currently directs the research program “Legitimacy in Global Governance” (LegGov), funded by Riksbankens Jubileumsfond. Tallberg’s book publications include Legitimacy in Global Governance: Sources, Processes, and Consequences (Oxford University Press, 2018), The Opening Up of International Organizations: Transnational Access in Global Governance (Cambridge University Press, 2013) and Leadership and Negotiation in the European Union (Cambridge University Press, 2006). His articles have appeared in journals such as International Organization, International Studies Quarterly, British Journal of Political Science, and European Journal of International Relations.

Susan Thomson: Susan Thomson (sthomson@colgate.edu) is Associate Professor of Peace and Conflict Studies at Colgate University. Her scholarship seeks to understand how systems of power structure the lives of individuals, and how individuals subject to power experience it in so-called times of Antonio Y. Vázquez-Arroyo: Antonio Y. Vázquez-Arroyo (a.vazquez@rutgers.edu) is Associate Professor in the Department of Political Science at Rutgers University-Newark. He is the author of Political Responsibility: Responding to Predicaments of Power (Columbia University Press, 2016). His writing has appeared in Constellations, Contemporary Political Theory, Historia y Sociedad, New Political Science, Political Theory, Polity, Postcolonial Studies, Radical Philosophy, and Theory & Event. Currently he is finishing a book on the dialectical legacy of critical theory. He also continues to work on the intersections between catastrophes and political life, an intellectual portrait of Sheldon S. Wolin’s and on transatlantic political thought.

Barbara Vis: Barbara Vis (orcid: 0000-0003-2323-3862) (b.vis@uu.nl) is Professor of Politics & Governance at Utrecht University. In her research, she uses insights from behavioral economics and psychology and related disciplines to explain puzzles in political science, especially in the fields on welfare state research and party behavior. This resulted in numerous articles in renowned international journals and several book publications. She has also published widely on Qualitative Comparative Analysis (QCA), ranging from empirical applications of the approach to methodological contributions. Her current research focuses mainly on how politicians make judgments and take decision making, using a multi-method approach.

Lisa Wedeen: Lisa Wedeen (Lwedeen@uchicago.edu) is the Mary R. Morton Professor of Political Science and the College, associate faculty in anthropology, and the co-director of the Chicago Center for Contemporary Theory at the University of Chicago. She is the author of Ambiguities of Domination: Politics, Rhetoric, and Symbols in Contemporary Syria, Peripheral Visions: Publics, Power, and Performance in Yemen, as well as Authoritarian Apprehensions: Ideology, Judgment, and Mourning in Syria, all published by the University of Chicago Press.

Juliet A. Williams: Juliet A. Williams (jawilliams@gender.ucla.edu) is Professor of Gender Studies and Chair of the UCLA Social Science Interdepartmental Program. Her most recent book is The Separation Solution? Single-Sex Education and the New Politics of Gender Equality (University of California Press, 2016). Currently she is working on an NSF-supported project exploring the concept of gender neutrality in U.S. law, media, and activism.

Elisabeth Jean Wood: Elisabeth Jean Wood (elisabeth.wood@yale.edu) is the Crosby Professor of the Human Environment and Professor of Political Science, International and Area Studies at Yale University. Her work focuses on political violence, particularly conflict-related sexual violence during civil war, as well as the agrarian legacies of war. A fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, she teaches courses on comparative politics, political violence, collective action, agrarian studies, and qualitative field research. Beginning in June 2020, she will be a co-editor of the American Political Science Review. She currently serves on the American Political Science Association’s Ad-hoc Committee on Human Subjects Research.

Deborah J. Yashar: Deborah J. Yashar (dyashar@princeton.edu) is Professor of Politics and International Affairs at Princeton University and Editor of World Politics. She writes about democracy and authoritarianism; citizenship; state formation; ethnic politics; violence; immigration; and Latin American Politics. She has written three single-authored books and co-edited 4 books. Her last book, Homicidal Ecologies in Latin America: Illicit Economies and Complicit States (Cambridge UP, 2018), received the 2019 best book prize from APSA’s Comparative Democratization section. She is also faculty co-chair of SSRC’s Anxieties of Democracy project, a member of various APSA committees (including for the Qualitative Transparency Deliberations, as well as Professional Ethics, Rights, and Freedoms) and is former president of APSA’s Politics & History Section.