

Daniel P. Aldrich, PhD, Associate Professor, University Faculty Scholar, Purdue University

Daniel P. Aldrich is an associate professor of political science and University Faculty Scholar at Purdue University. His research interests include post-disaster recovery, the siting of controversial facilities, the interaction between civil society and the state, and the socialization of women and men through experience. He has recently held posts as a Fulbright Research Fellow at Tokyo University and as an AAAS Science and Technology Fellow with USAID. Daniel has written 3 books and more than 60 peer reviewed articles, op eds, reviews, and book chapters.