

2018 CATCh-uS: Children and adolescents with Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder in transition between children's services and adult services

Mapping the availability of services for people aged 18 and above with ADHD

The CATCh-uS study is funded by the National Institute for Health Research and has ethical approval. Details can be found on our website. The aim of this survey is to map available services for people with Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) who are aged 18 and over. This is to inform and improve service provision for young adults with ADHD. We only want to know about services you are aware of and/or have used for the management of ADHD. We will not share any of your personal information. The survey is anonymous and confidential. Answers will help to update a list of existing services, available here.

The survey should take no longer than 5 minutes to complete.
